94 Elements is an ambitious global documentary film project that knits together a series of diverse films telling the story of each chemical element of the periodic table, from Argon to Zinc.

It discusses how we use them in everyday life and how, through their stories, we reveal patterns of our economies, our relationships with natural resources, and our own personal histories.

The film project (developed by PFilm) has currently covered around 12 elements, with more planned for the next year.
