Accessible? is an app for accessibility information where a place can be searched by name, location, category, distance or activity.

The search results in a map or list with ratings according to the user's predetermined accessibility profile, and features relevant information with pictures.

It aims to be the first universal, multi-lingual, trans-border tool to help people share and find accessibility information - from mums with buggies, to the disabled and the elderly. It also integrates beacon systems to guide people who are blind, or people with orientation difficulties, to safely find their way.

The app isn't available yet, but you can register your interest and be informed when the app is released.
