Commonplace is an intuitive web-based tool for collecting people's views on local issues. These views are an essential part of planning, proposing a new development and knowing how people feel about their community.

Commonplace is used by property developers, local authorities, housing associations, community groups and transport operators. Adding a comment takes just seconds using a PC, tablet or smartphone. This data can then be viewed, analysed and exported, to be used as an evidence base and as a supplement to traditional community engagement. Commonplace is a transparent, neutral platform that supports informed and more collaborative planning.
