Around the world, an increasing number of parliaments are embracing the principles of parliamentary openness: ensuring public access to legislative information, providing opportunities for meaningful citizen participation, and embracing the possibilities presented by new technologies. The Legislative Openness Data Explorer provides global, comparative information on parliamentary openness.

All data on the site was crowdsourced from parliaments or parliamentary monitoring organisations. The Explorer contains information on 31 chambers of parliament. All the data is freely available for download and basic analyses and comparisons can be conducted on the Explore page. Users are encouraged to find creative uses of this data to advance legislative openness.
