In their fight to save women's lives, health workers are in need of information, tools, technologies, skills and peer connection. Maternova is building a portal for innovation in global maternal and neonatal health. Think of them as a niche Amazon-type platform but for global health technologies. They make it easy for doctors, nurses, midwives and the organisations that equip them to track innovation and to buy technologies and kits to use overseas. The focus is on 'frugal' tools and protocols that save lives in childbirth, but they are rapidly expanding to a range of other global health products.
